GENERAL INTEREST DOCUMENTARIES

(See "General Interest Documentaries" section for detailed screenings, publications, press, and awards)

Teta (25 minutes, 2017)

<http://tetadocumentary.com/>

This short documentary tells the story of my journey nursing my youngest son, Santiago, for twenty-two months. Teta uses my narration and the footage shot by my husband to portray the ups and downs of nursing a baby as a working mother of two. As the film shows Santiago go from his first nursing session minutes after being born to his last as a walking and talking toddler, Teta illustrates the transcendent emotional bond created by nursing, not only between mother and child but between all members of the family. It has been the official selection at fourteen film festivals and received five film festival awards.

William and Santiago Simultaneous (5 minutes, 2016)

<http://williamandsantiago.com/>

This short documentary asks a question millions of parents ask themselves: just how alike are my children? I filmed my sons reaching the same milestones during the boys' first year of life and placed them side by side on the screen so audiences can see how the boys' individual journeys mirror each other. Besides providing a meditation on how siblings grow up, the film is a joyful look at what it's like to make sense of the world for the first time. It has been the official selection at four film festivals.

Vanishing Borders (90 minutes, 2014)

<http://www.vanishingbordersfilm.com/>

This feature documentary showcases the lives of four immigrant women living in New York City, who transform their communities with their work. The film provides a personal and complex portrayal of immigration in contrast to the abstract and generalized representations often found in the mainstream media. It has been the official selection at eleven film festivals and seven universities, received five film festival awards, and been featured on multiple press outlets.

PERFECT: A Conversation with the Venezuelan Middle Class About Female Beauty and Breast Implants (25 minutes, 2009)

<http://alexandrahidalgo.com/perfect.php>

This short documentary features interviews with 13 middle-class Venezuelan women and men discussing the prevalence of breast implant surgery in their motherland. It has been the official selection at four film festivals and screened various conferences.

ACADEMIC DOCUMENTARIES

(See page 13 for detailed screenings and publications)

Lifting as We Climb: The Coalition of Women Scholars in the History of Rhetoric and Composition 25 Years and Beyond (20 minutes, 2015)

<http://peitho.cwshrc.org/lifting-as-we-climb-the-coalition-of-women-scholars-in-the-history-of-rhetoric-and-composition-25-years-and-beyond-2/>

This short documentary features interviews with nine members of the Coalition in order to record its history and discuss the challenges and goals that will shape the next quarter of a century. It was published in Peitho.

The Underside of Dracula: Community and Masculinity in Pinball (20 minutes, 2013)

http://tundra.csd.sc.edu/itineration/submission_pages/mlarcade/hidalgo/index.html

This short documentary showcases interviews with three members of the Main Street Amusements Pinball League in Lafayette, Indiana. The interviewees discuss the ways in which pinball has helped them bond with fellow players and develop their identity as pinball players, as well as why women tend to be absent from leagues such as theirs. It was published in Itineration.

Writing and Working for Change Video Project (five 20-minute videos, 2012)

As a component of NCTE's Listening to our Elders: Writing and Working for Change, edited by Samantha Blackmon, Cristina Kirklighter, and Stephen Parks, I filmed interviews with members and past and present chairs of the American Indian, Asian/Asian American, Black, Latina/o, and Queer Caucuses. I edited the interviews, as well as footage of caucus meetings and member presentations into short documentaries that discuss the history, current situation, and goals of the caucuses, while exploring the benefits of inter-caucus collaboration. The films are featured on NCTE's website.

Hutton Lecture Series (four videos of various lengths, 2010)

I filmed the Hutton Lecture Series, a biannual event sponsored by Purdue University's Rhetoric and Composition program. The speakers were Jacqueline Jones Royster, James Dubinsky, Malea Powell, and Christiane Donahue. Through this project, the Hutton Lectures are publicly accessible for the first time since their inception, widening their reach and creating a record for future scholars.

Making Writing Public: Introductory Composition and Purdue 2009 Showcase (20 minutes, 2009)

<http://youtu.be/pZjBUAe3ATc>

In this short documentary, I interview graduate and undergraduate presenters at the Introductory Composition at Purdue Showcase, as well as student and faculty attendees who discuss their reactions to the work. Making Writing Public presents a spectrum of the kinds of projects produced by Purdue students, providing audiences with an in-depth look at the rhetorical thinking developed in First-Year Composition courses. The documentary screened at Computers and Writing Conference.

SOCIAL MEDIA AND PUBLIC INTERNATIONAL WORK

Parents in the Palais: An Open Letter to the 70th Cannes Film Festival

June 2017

Four fellow filmmakers and activists, Sophie Mayer, Mathilde Dratwa, Barbara Ann O’Leary, and Marian Evans, and I wrote a letter to the Cannes Film Festival suggesting that they rethink their 2017 policy of excluding parents who work in the film industry from the festival when accompanied by their children and providing examples from film festivals around the world that have welcoming policies to parents and their children.

Published on agnès films, the letter was been signed by 340 filmmakers, actors, film critics, film festival organizers, distributors, scholars, and activists from 35 countries. Those who have added their names to this cause include Academy-Award winning director Joanna Natasegara, “The Diary of a Teenage Girl” director Marielle Heller, “The Curious Case of Benjamin Button” and “Wakefield” screenwriter and director Robin Swicord, “Just Seen It” actor and director Liz Manashil, “Edge of Tomorrow,” and “London Has Fallen” actor Charlotte Riley, and head of development, production, and acquisition at Amazon Studios Ted Hope.

#StrengthThruActivism Campaign

November 2016

Working with four undergraduate students, Hannah Countryman, Elena Cronick, Sabrina Hirsch, and Jessica Kukla, I started the #StrengthThruActivism campaign, which invites people to use that hashtag in order to discuss and promote activist projects, such as films and videos, art exhibits, performances, scholarly publications, protests, and so on. In order to launch and sustain interest in the campaign, we’ve created dozens of promotional postcards made up of our original photography and slogans to invite people to respond to oppression in productive and creative ways. We also engage with everyone who posts to the hashtag.

Campaign Announcement: “agnès films launches the #StrengthThruActivism Campaign in Response to Trump Presidency.”

#DirectedbyWomen/ agnès films Twitter Campaign and Screenings

September 2016

agnès films teamed up with #DirectedbyWomen for a social media campaign supporting the work of women directors during the month of September. The campaign included one video, four Twitter chats, one Twitter interview, and two screenings of films directed by women. Besides working with #DirectedbyWomen’s

Barbara Ann O’Leary, I collaborated with the agnès films staff of undergraduate students (Elena Cronick, Hannah Countryman, Sabrina Hirsch, Jessica Kukla, Savannah Smith, Sarah Shaw, Lindsey Spitzley, and Jenna Ange) in order to create promotional materials, write press releases, and make the video.

#FavWomanFilmmaker Campaign

From November 9 – November 12, 2015.

I led six undergraduate students (Katie Grimes, Sabrina Hirsch, Shell Little, Sarah Shaw, Savannah Smith, and Lindsey Spitzley,) and Ph.D. student Shewonda Leger in organizing and running a Twitter campaign around the hashtag #FavWomanFilmmaker to explore why so few people have favorite women filmmakers and to discuss the work of women filmmakers around the world.

EDITORIAL WORK

agnès films: supporting women and feminist filmmakers, Co-founder and Editor-in-Chief

April 2010 – present

<http://agnesfilms.com>

agnès films is both an online community and a venue for publishing work about feminist and female-centered film and video production by filmmakers and scholars. The site aims to foster women’s and feminist filmmaking and to provide a meeting place for filmmakers and scholars interested in film studies, feminism, and/or the production process. As co-founder, I developed and wrote about the site’s mission and what we are aiming to achieve with this community. I also designed the site’s aesthetic and architecture with fellow cofounder, Caitlan Spronk and redesigned it in 2015 it with experience architect Shell Little. As editor-in-chief, I seek submissions, edit multiple drafts of our contributors and staff writers’ work, coordinate our monthly Twitter Chats, and make sure that the work we publish reflects our vision and meets the needs of our audience. I also supervise undergraduate students who perform our social media, work as webmasters, write and make videos for the site, post and copy edit content, and help me come up with ideas to move the site forward.

constellations: a cultural rhetorics publishing space, Managing Editor

May 2016 – present

<http://constell8cr.com/>

Alongside Malea Powell, Phill Bratta, and Cindy Tekkobe I am one of the editors of constellations: a cultural rhetorics publishing space. constellations is a peer-reviewed, open access journal that seeks to make review practices in our field more helpful and generative to authors by providing authors with mentors for getting their work ready for publication. In order to make the work of mentors and others involved in the editorial process visible, constellations lists every role played in the production of an article, such as copy-editing and posting. The journal publishes scholarship that features video, podcasts, webtexts, art work, etc.

Present Tense: A Journal of Rhetoric in Society, Founding Editor and Multimedia Editor

July 2009 – May 2016

<http://www.presenttensejournal.org>.

Present Tense is a peer reviewed, blind-refereed journal that publishes conference-length articles and multimedia scholarship with a focus on current events and the ways in which rhetoric intersects with culture, politics, economics, and social issues. As a founding editor, I worked on Present Tense’s web design and text development teams while we defined our goals and identity as a journal. My work as a multimedia editor included fostering the publication of articles that make extensive use of video, sound, images, and hyperlinking, assisting authors with technological questions, and helping determine the aesthetic of our multimedia publications. After leaving my post as multimedia editor, I have remained on the review board.

From January-December 2015, I collaborated with Donnie Johnson Sackey in co-editing Present Tense’s Race, Rhetoric, and the State Special Issue.
